Hamilton Spikes Rumor Republican Party Biased

Probe $1,000,000 Poultry Racket

NEW YORK (Spl.)—With government agents taking a hand in the investigation the inquiry into the $1,000,000 poultry racket, most of which comes from Jewish purses, was being pushed here with questioning of Charles Herbert, notorious racketeer, by the Bronx district attorney.

Herbert is shown at left trying to escape the camera's eye as he entered the Bronx courthouse.

Charges by William Fellowes Morgan, Jr., commissioner of markets, that he has regained control of the shoetim union and is making new demands on the operators of kosher poultry slaughter houses, will be probed by Thomas E. Dewey special prosecutor of rackets.

Won't Talk On Her Religion

LONDON, Eng. (Spl.)—With the Wimbledon title her's after a career of tennis struggle, Helen Jacobs, who has refused interviews on her religion, but who is purported to be Jewish, has no new worlds to conquer in the tennis realm. Many times American champ, Helen had been checkmated four times in her quest of the prized English title.

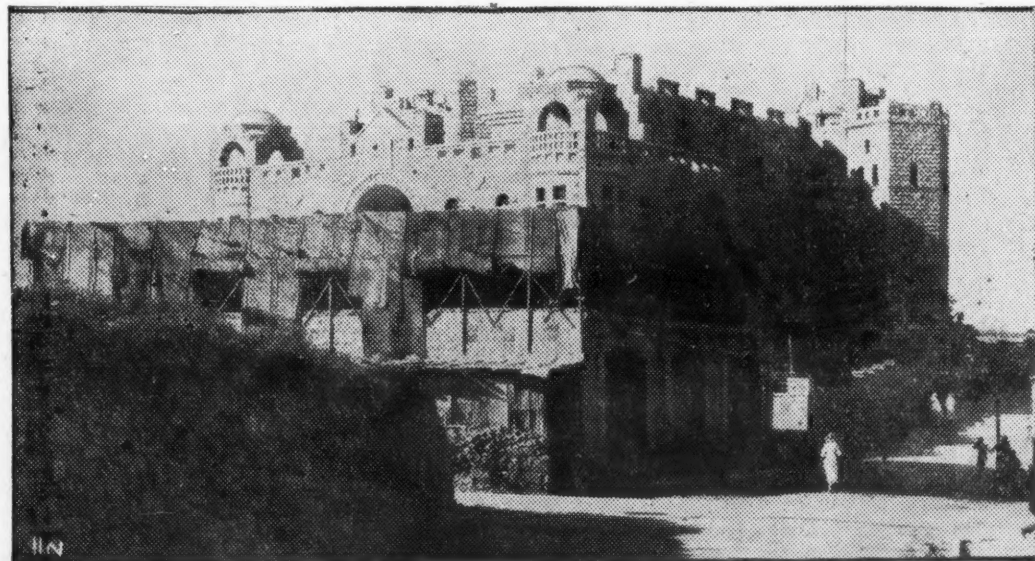

Control Fight From Barracks

JAFFA (Spl.)—Manoeuvres of British soldiers looking toward the restoration of peace in Palestine are being charted from the Jaffa barracks shown below.

New fatalities continue to add to the death toll, with most of the casualties Arabs who continue to fight against British rule. Although events of the past few days are not as exciting as in the past, the rioting has by no means abated.

Sales Large For Watchmen of Night

CINCINNATI (Spl.)—Large sale of Betty Kalisher's short biographies of great Jewish men in history, have been reported by the Union of American Hebrew Congregation, here, publishers of the volume under the title, "Watchmen of the Night."

Recounting the lives and achievements of great figures from Jochanan ben Zakkai up to and including Isaac M. Wise, the book is historically accurate and closely analytical.

Whispering Drive Laid To Democrats

NEW YORK (Spl.)—Denying that he or Governor Landon was anti-Semitic and declaring as false rumors that Jews who had been prominent in other national Republican campaigns were to be kept out of important positions in the coming drive, John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, laid responsibility for the whispering campaign at the door of the Democratic Party.

"Let us have it out in the open and let us have it straight once and for all time," Mr. Hamilton said. "First, let it be understood that Governor Landon is just as much opposed to religious and racial intolerance as I am."

Citing his record and that of Governor Landon, Mr. Hamilton showed that both had fought aggressively in Kansas against religious intolerance when the Ku Klux Klan was a power in the state, Governor Landon, Mr. Hamilton said, had actually bolted a candidate for governor of his own party in 1924 because he was running with Klan endorsement and supported William Allen White, who ran as an independent in protest against the Klan-endorsed Republican. Mr. Hamilton said he had taken a licking as candidate for governor in 1928 because he had chosen to make his campaign on an anti-Klan platform.

"I could think of nothing more unfortunate than to have the religious issue dragged into a political campaign," Mr. Hamilton said. "There is no truth in the rumors that have been circulated, and to which my attention has been called. This is a deliberate attempt on the part of those other people to throw a dust cloud when they know their ship is sinking. We have a red herring in every campaign and apparently this is the first attempt to draw one across the trail in the campaign now opening."

DICKSTEIN SUES NAZI

NEW YORK (Spl.)—Charging libel, Representative Samuel Dickstein, this week obtained a summons against William Zenger, publisher of The National American, defunct pro-Nazi publication.

The article Mr. Dickstein declared was libelous said:

"These investigations at $30,000 per and more are profitable enterprises for men like Mr. Dickstein to be interested in. Dickstein would make Tammany look sick when it comes to investigating rackets."

The Editor's Chair

What Mr. Slutsky had in mind in his letter of several weeks ago when he suggested that the layout of this paper might be improved is still an enigma to us. The make-up of the pages of this paper follow, more or less, the orthodox layout of most newspapers, whether tabloid or not. Certainly, our pages could not be termed dull.

Referring to Mr. Slutsky's comment on the size of the pictures on Page One, there is little improvement that could be effected here. The photographs are purchased in matrix form from picture distributing agencies and cannot be reduced in size. However, this chair thinks that large pictures more often than not are more desirable than small pictures.

The editorials, Mr. Slutsky said, could with pruning, be improved considerably. Here we must agree with him. However when he says that the editorial language might be brought closer to everyday speech, it is our contention that he is assailing the one part of a newspaper which should be inviolate from the wishes of the reader, except in cases, like the one above, in connection with the length of the editorials. The editorial page belongs to the editor, not the readers. If the editor sought to guide his editorial opinion, verbiage, or subjects by what the readers wanted, he would be yielding a sacred prerogative, and sabotaging the personality of his publication.

Probably most readers of this paper feel that Rabbi Wise is the one man to be entrusted with the task of fighting every battle of the Jew. Yet the editor has consistently fought this centralization of power in the hands of one man. Should the editor, then, change his opinion, I think that even the most rabid Wise supporter would answer in the negative.

The editorial page, like a man's

Rabbi Wise's Career at Critical Point

Only the deliberately-myopic can purport to read in the elevation of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise to the presidency of the Zionist Organization the unanimous call of the Jews of the United States to a great leader that some have declared his election to be.

The truth is that Rabbi Wise, for once in his life, was not wanted to head the Z. O. A. He was accepted without the vote of the delegates under an arrangement which varied not one whit from Herr Hitler's most recent election tactics.

Of the few truthful editors in the Anglo-Jewish press, two hazarded a statement as to what actually transpired in Providence where Rabbi Wise was within a dying man's last breath of starting on the decline in American Jewish life.

An editorial in the Jewish Ledger, of Hartford, Conn., declared in part:

"The statement of the committee, read by Dr. Israel Goldstein, was a masterpiece of salve, and was in the classic tradition of easing a man out of office for the sake of another. It released the tension of the delegates who were becoming restive by reason of the fact that for two and one-half days they had been wandering about Providence whilst the leaders were behind closed doors, 'democratically' ironing out the leadership problem, and the ambitions and squabbles within the Zionist Organization. Important problems were awaiting the deliberation of the delegates to the Zionist Convention: The problems of Palestine and of the Jewish settlement there in this particularly trying, critical time, there was the problem of reorganization of the movement to make it more effective; there was the matter of the cultural activities of the movement which continue to be tragically neglected; there was the problem of a growing bureaucracy in the Zionist Organization against which delegate after delegate in conversation in the corridors was fuming and fussing. But the convention waited for two and one-half days whilst in 'smoke-filled rooms' leaders were bartering for the glory and the spoils of office."

And another publication, the Chicago Jewish Chronicle, commenting on the disgusting manner in which the elected delegates were treated wrote:

"The New England delegation under the leadership of Captain Everts called a special meeting to protest against the delay. In opening this meeting the chairman of the New England delegation asked this question of the delegates—'Are we delegates, or are we cattle?' One delegate shouted—'We are cattle, because we came to such a convention.' (This the audience applauded but the chairman took exception to this remark, namely, that cattle do not applaud), so therefore, it is assumed that we are delegates but treated like cattle. It was finally decided to send an ultimatum to the peace makers to stop creating trouble, and proceed with the business of the convention, and if not, the delegates would leave for their homes. Soon after it was finally announced that both factions had reached an agreement."

For two and one-half days the fate of Rabbi Wise was debated. It was evident that the opinion of the rank and file of the delegates was definitely anti-Wise, and that had the presidency ever been brought to an open vote Rabbi Wise would have been defeated.

It is also evident that Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, or almost any dark horse for that matter, could have been elected had anyone sought to organize the delegates behind a new man.

However, that is past history.

But like all history, it teaches a lesson. And the man to whom it teaches the lesson most forcefully is Rabbi Stephen S. Wise.

Rabbi Wise's future is at stake. But even Rabbi Wise must realize this. He knows that now, more than any one other Jewish man or group of Jewish men, the fate of many Jews of the world, rests in his decisions, and in his wisdom.

It is a priceless victim whose destiny is at stake.

The Providence Convention, mainly through Morris Rothenberg, placed a mandate in the hands of the new leadership in the Z. O. A. calling for the decentralization of the Z. O. A. Rabbi Wise's past history, and the story of his accomplishments have in their resemblance to a one-man rule been in direct contradiction to this theory of governing. In this respect alone his stewardship of the Z. O. A. will be a severe test. Will Rabbi Wise subdivide the United States into Zionist Districts which will have a large measure of self autonomy or will he try to dictate the policies of the Z. O. A. by himself?

The Z. O. A. lost a remarkable opportunity in the past few years to skyrocket its membership and create the strongest Jewish organization in the world. It may yet salvage much from the carryover of the days of Palestine's unimpeded march into the eyes of the world as the greatest Jewish accomplishment of the modern era.

Whatever Rabbi Wise does in the next year will make history. Whether it tells a story to posterity of grief and decline of the Jews of the world or recounts the march into a great era of renewed freedom and opportunity for the Jews rests in the hands of one man—Rabbi Wise. But whatever Rabbi Wise does he should remember that a critical U. S. Jewry is watching him. Every step he takes will be watched by an awakened American Jewry, which last week almost decapitated this tumultuous figure in American Jewish life.

Jews the Best Warriors of the Twentieth Century

Commenting on the disproportionate number of Jewish officers in the Italian expedition of aggrandizement into Abyssinia, a writer in the Morning Post, of London, wrote: "General Graziani is one of the number of Jews who have become notable military commanders in the twentieth century. The Jews of Bible times were natural soldiers. But from the diaspora to the nineteenth century they turned their attention much more to the arts of peace, particularly commerce. In the twentieth century the names of Monash, Trotsky and Graziani, with many lesser, indicate a reversion to the old tradition."

These words by the English writer followed on publication of the news that more than 300 Jews held commissions in the Italian army, included among which were at least ten members of the general staff in the late African campaign. Il Duce Mussolini is reported to have stated when these figures were shown to him for comment that "the Jews have been great soldiers since the days of Joshua and King David."

In the letter column in this issue, Alfred M. E. Meyerowitz, deputy chief of staff of the Jewish War Veterans of the United States, makes the declaration that although only three per cent of the nation's population joined the armed forces of the U. S. during the World War, five per cent of the Jews of the country took part in the great conflagration."

Evidently then, it is true, that Jews are now in the twentieth century, the best warriors. The great number of Jewish prizefighters might be adduced in further support of this contention.

But as the Prophets might say, "So What?"

The Yiddish Theatre Comes to Broadway

Although for many years it has contributed more than its share of stars to the legitimate stage and to the screen, it is only with this fall that the Yiddish Theatre will take its rightful place in the general scene of the American stage when its productions will be made accessible to Broadway theatre-goers through Broadway houses.

According to an announcement made this week, Joseph Buloff, late of the Yiddish Art Troupe, has leased the Forty-Ninth Street Theatre from the Shuberts for a period of a year. At the same time announcement was made of negotiations by the Artef, Yiddish group, to acquire the Longacre Theatre for the coming season.

Paul Muni played with Yiddish troupes on the East Side for years before his superior portrayals won for him the attention of uptown producers. Jacob Ben Ami is another who, like Muni, got his start on the Yiddish stage. And now Molly Picon, inimitable Yiddish heroine, is reported to be seeking a leading part in a Broadway production for this fall.

Never contaminated by the sophistication which has removed Broadway almost to the point of its divorcement from the general American scene, the Yiddish theatre has, probably more than any other aspect of the American stage, been a stage of folk plays. Jewish life as portrayed on the stage has been Jewish life as it is lived by Jews, and nothing more.

Freedom of the Press

Says Should Repudiate Reform Rabbis

To the Editor:

Below is my own and the expression of various members of the Jewish War Veterans of U. S. anent the action of the Conference of Reform Rabbis. While you may quote me as a Deputy Chief of Staff of J. W. V., please note that it is my personal opinion. The National Body of J. W. V., has not yet had opportunity to discuss the affair in executive council.

ALFRED M. E. MEYEROWITZ.
Newark, N. J.

At this time, when Jews the world over are trying to put down the false accusation of lack of patriotism, who are these self-appointed spokesmen who dared ask at their Cape May Convention for military exemption for "Jewish Conscientious Objectors?" Such a request infers that there is a considerable number. Let us look at the record.

Who ever heard of "Jewish Conscientious Objectors?" Who ever heard of the C. C. A. R., for that matter? We'll admit that the American Jews, and Gentiles, too, are not only conscientious objectors firmly opposed to an aggressive war, but not to defensive action.

Jewish Conscientious Objectors, indeed, and still though comprising only three per cent of the nation's population, the Jews contributed 250,000 or 5 per cent of their number to the armed forces during the World War. Three thousand Jews were killed in battle (out of a total of 60,000 combat dead). (Even in Germany, the Jewish casualties amounted to 12,000 and an ungrateful nation is now busily expunging their names from battle monuments.)

Let every Jew living under the only government that holds out any permanent promise of security for our people rise to repudiate this group who dares put the Jews of America in this untrue and unfavorable light.

California, Here
We Come!

To the Editor:

Lower California is for sale. Thousands of unfortunate Jews in the Old World are seeking a homeland or safe place to live in. Many Jews in the New World desire a place to live with their own government and their own flag.

Such is the picture now before the Jewish people. As in everyday life new ideas and new happenings are continually springing up before us, and this is indeed one to gaze upon with serious thought.

Louis Silverman, of Lawrence, Mass., has begun a movement to urge the purchase of Southern California, as a haven for dispossessed and persecuted Jews.

Throughout Europe, life for our people is misery. In Palestine, riots, and Arabic outbreaks have become a habit and, according to Mr. Lawrence, Jerusalem is not a place where an entirely Jewish country could be established.

Lower California can comfortably accommodate more than half of the Jews of the world. The government here could be that of any other section of the country, where the entire population live and do everything that they think best, providing their acts are not harmful to others.

In an article in the June issue of the magazine of the Jewish War Veterans, Silverman asks that this group take the initiative, and urge the purchase of Lower California, by the Jews of the world, as a haven for our unfortunate people.

The entire Jewish population of the world should join in the move.

And now to the most pleasurable part of this column . . . that of awarding the flowers for this week . . . who is the outstanding Jewish personality of this week, and of the whole year for that matter? . . . what person is deserving of this additional honor? . . . I have, with the approval of the Jewry of Indianapolis, chosen none other than Louis J. Borinstein. . . . I can't think of anyone in Indianapolis Jewry who is more deserving of honor, recognition and the flowers than Mr. Borinstein. . . . he has for many years been an outstanding figure in our city and state . . . not only for his many diversified Jewish activities but also for his civic and economic interest in this city's welfare. . . . Letters

Dear Doug:

Please accept my deepest thanks and sincere gratitude for the fine tribute you paid me as expressed in your column in The Jewish Post last week.

I received the beautiful flowers, which Mrs. Karabell and myself appreciated more than ordinarily.

With kindest personal regards and best wishes, I beg to remain.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES J. KARABELL.

Dear Doug:

I was quite touched and overwhelmed when I received the bouquet of roses and gardenias which you sent me on last Friday, and then when I read all the complimentary and nice things you said about me in the last edition of The Jewish Post, I was quite overcome.

I don't think I deserved them all, but nevertheless I am just human enough to appreciate everything, and I do want to thank you for being so thoughtful and kind to me.

Sincerely yours,

MRS. ISAAC (BERTHA) BORN.

300 Jewish Officers In Campaign

LONDON (Spl.)—That more than three hundred Jews held commissions in the Italian Army and participated in the African campaign was learned here from various unofficial sources. Heading the group, according to the reports, is General Graziani, who commanded the armies in South Ethiopia, and at least ten members of the general staff.

When the figures were reported to Mussolini, Il Duce is said to have commented:

"I don't see how these statistics were obtained. I don't care. I hope they are true, for the Jews have been great soldiers since the days of Joshua and King David."

Blame Laid To Rabbis

SEATTLE, Wash. (Spl.)—Blame for most of the ills of American Jewry was laid squarely at the door of the rabbinate by Rabbi Max H. Kert, 31-year-old rabbi of Santa Monica, Cal., who is visiting here.

"I do not hesitate to say that upon the rabbinate rightly goes the blame for most of the ills of American Jewry," Rabbi Kert declared.

GERMAN WRITING DECLINES

NEW YORK (Spl.)—Declaring that there is not a German writer left in Germany worth thinking about, Mrs. Alfred A. Knopf described the plight of German emigre publishers and authors in flight from Nazi persecution as tragic, on her return from Europe aboard the French liner Normandie this week.

Jewish Exhibit At Centennial Popular

DALLAS, Tex. (Spl.)—The Jewish exhibit in the Hall of Religion here is attracting much attention.

On entering the section marked Jewish, the visitor sees two silk-draped Torahs in an Ark in the center of the wall. On either side are screens upon which are shown slides depicting modern Jewish contributions to the progress of the world.

Among the famous men shown on the slides are Albert Einstein, Lion Feuchtwanger, Sigmund Freud, Sir Moses Montefiore, Jacob Epstein, Herbert H. Lehman, and many others. The part played by U. S. Jewry since the discovery of America by Columbus is also shown on the slides.

Jewish week has been designated for the first week in October when Rabbi David Lefkowitz, of Dallas, will present a program of especial interest to Jews.

ALBANY, N. Y. (Spl.)—Governor Herbert H. Lehman may take the stump throughout the United States in behalf of President Roosevelt's campaign for re-election, it was announced here.

School Is Haven For Children

NEW YORK (Spl.)—Jewish children hate their poor homes, often located in basements and garrets, so much that they beg for permission to stay in school as long as possible, I. M. Newman, editor of The Haint, Yiddish daily of Warsaw, declared in an article released here by the Joint Distribution Committee.

"Permission to stay in a school that has light, clean rooms is a great privilege," Mr. Newman wrote.

At another point the article says: "It is customary for wealthy high school students to send in food for the poor children in the elementary public schools. Each bite of bread is actually divided. It often happens that a poor child has not the heart to eat the entire roll given him and hides one-half of it to bring home to his sick mother."

Bonnie Miller Shuns Tourneys

LOS ANGELES, Cal. (Spl.)—Winner of the California State and the Coronado women's tennis titles, Bonnie Miller Blank, Jewish star, will not go east to compete in the national tournaments, she announced here.

One of the finest womens' players in the nation, Mrs. Blank plays for the love of the game only. Tennis critics believe she could develop into a national figure if she devoted her entire time to practice.

The shirt with a large "L" in red on the pocket was presented to McDonald who posed as a new member of Pelley's Christian Party.

McDonald reported that a copy of The Jewish Transcript was on Pelley's desk.

2 Theatres Are Leased

NEW YORK (Spl.)—With negotiations already completed for the leasing of one Broadway theatre, and a second transaction in the offing, Broadway will have two houses offering Yiddish shows to New York this fall.

Heretofore located on the East Side, the Yiddish theatre will make its first ambitious appearance on Broadway in the next few months. Joseph Buloff, late of the Yiddish Art Troupe, has leased the Forty-Ninth Street Theatre from the Shuberts, and the Artef group are attempting to acquire the Longacre Theatre for the coming season.

Ousted Radicals Defy Congress

NEW YORK (Spl.)—Prevented from taking part in the recent Washington Conference, delegates of 512 Jewish labor and social welfare groups designating themselves as radicals voted to send five delegates to the World Jewish Congress meeting in Geneva next month.

In announcing the decision of the groups, a statement adopted at the meeting here said: "Unfortunately the American Jewish Congress, which received a mandate to organize the American delegation to the World Jewish Congress, excluded many organizations of the Jewish people, limiting themselves, to Zionist and Zionist-influenced groups."

The move by the admittedly radical group constitutes the first threat to harmonious sessions in Geneva.

LONDON, Eng. (Spl.)—Faced by haste, terror and insecurity, 65,144 Jews of Germany who left their home to wander over the face of the globe, as the sketch above reveals, were given help from the Joint Distribution Committee's many agencies.

In the past year alone, 16,524 emigrants who were forced to tear their families from their life's environment to make a new home elsewhere, were aided by the J. D. C.

The sketch does not show all the emigrants of the past three years, since many were helped by their own family and by friends. The total is estimated to be at least 100,000.

Gets Autographs Of 3 Famous Men

NEW YORK (Spl.)—Lewis Edelstein, 14, is proudly displaying to friends the autographs of three famous men all on one page of his autograph book. Attending the Triborough Bridge Dedication, Edelstein thrust an autograph book into President Roosevelt's lap when the car was halted for traffic. The President signed the book and handed it to Governor Lehman, who added his autograph.

Not content, Lewis dashed for Mayor LaGuardia's car. When Mayor LaGuardia recognized him as the boy who had secured his autograph eight times in the past few weeks, young Edelstein said, "You're in good company now and I want your signature on the same page as the President."

The Mayor then furnished the third name on the page with alacrity.

CHICAGO (Spl.)—Two Jewish physicians have been credited with the discovery of a method to make X-ray examinations of the stomach more accurate. In an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Abraham Myerson and Dr. Max Ritve explain how the stomach may be X-rayed more accurately by means of a drug.

L. ROTHSCHILD.
Indianapolis, Ind.

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (Spl.)—Murat Bey, 52, former secretary to the Sultan of Turkey, and scion of a prominent Turkish-Jewish family, was injured fatally on the Albany Post Road last week.

Residents of Rochester since last July, the Beys—Mr. and Mrs. Bey and their four children—settled here after four years of travel through Europe and the Near East. Mr. Bey had been secretary to the Sultans of Turkey for more than thirty years.

In an interview with The Jewish Ledger, of Rochester, Mr. Bey recounted how he had often been approached by the Jews of Turkey to use his good offices to intercede with the Sultan whenever Jewish rights or property were violated. Mr. Bey spoke twelve languages, and his first employer was Abdul Hamid, who had 1,000 wives and concubines.

When the ex-Kaiser visited Turkey, Mr. Bey was assigned to his entourage as interpreter.

Charge Of Laxity Laid To Britain

GENEVA (Spl.)—Recounting how trains are being riddled by Arab sharpshooters, Miss Katherine Lyman, of Fort Washington, L. I., declared that she had made a trip through Palestine a week before the outbreak of the riots, and couldn't understand why the British had not made some provisions to prevent the occurrence which was so obviously in the offing.

She said she could not understand why the British had not strengthened their military force in time or had not kept a heavy garrison there as the French do in Syria.

Crowds See New Film

NEW YORK (Spl.)—A picturization of Jews in Palestine for the past fifty years is drawing capacity crowds to the Cameo Theatre here where "This Is the Land," a film in Hebrew with English titles opened last week.

Portraying pioneer work in the Holy Land, the film is in the nature of a huge newsreel, with beautiful photography and accompanied by well modulated and appealing music.

The film is the successor to "Land of Promise."
